As if attempting an ocean crossing, the culture and character of the Mediterranean stretch all the way to the Portuguese Azores and Spanish Canary Islands, two remote havens with largely untouched shores and unique natural wonders. Awe-inspiring volcanic craters, azure lakes and hot springs abound on São Miguel and Pico of the Azores, while Las Canarias feature lunar-like steppes, a variety of ecosystems, vibrant and historic towns, beautiful beaches and Tenerife's majestic El Teide, a volcano dotted by fantastic egg-shaped lava formations, some up to five metres in diameter.
